

Mastering The Magick Of Witchcraft
<http://www.masteringmagickwitchcraft.com>

Rose Ariadne Blog
<http://www.rose-ariadne.com>

Ask Rose Ariadne
<http://www.askroseariadne.com>

About Teen Witches

It's never too early to start practicing Wicca! There are a lot of resources out there for the burgeoning teen witch. Lots of the books on Wicca that are available are appropriate for a new witch, but it's important to remember that no one author knows all the answers. Therefore, it's important, especially when you're just starting out, to think critically about everything you read. Not everyone is honest, especially if you decide to use the Internet to help your search, and some people prey specifically on questioning teenagers.

Then there's dealing with your parents, who may disapprove of your spiritual choices. First, remember that your parents have the law on their side, so do your best to work within their wants. Minors are effectively second class citizens, so your parents really are the ones with the power!

If you want to pursue a discussion with your disapproving parents about Wicca, try and figure out why your parents are opposed to your interest in witchcraft. Is it because they practice a religion that disagrees with Wiccan practices? Is it because they don't really know what Wicca is about? Maybe they have some ideas about Wicca that aren't true; for example they may be likening it to Satanism, and therefore might be worried for your safety.

If the issue is misconceptions about Wicca, then you have a chance at opening a dialogue with them. You can try and educate them, sharing your adventures into Wicca with them. It might help, for example, to show them some of the books and websites you've read or are reading. If you have Wiccan friends who are good people, you might introduce them, so that your parents can see that the majority of those who follow Wicca are healthy people who don't sacrifice goats in their spare time! If you choose the education route, make sure that you are well read and have done your research. After all, you will have to be able to support your beliefs, not only through emotion but through logic and the strength of your sources. Remember that your parents care about you, and only want you to be happy and safe. If you can prove to them that Wicca is not a threat to either your happiness or your safety, then you're well on your way to bringing them around to your side.

If your parents aren't receptive to learning about Wicca, for example if they are fundamentalist Christians, it may be best to keep silent, at least until you are eighteen or until you move out of their house. Remember I said above that the law is on the side of the parents? It's true. Minors have, essentially, no rights. So do your own learning and be sure to keep anything to do with Wicca away from your house. In the meantime you can find information on the internet, at a friend's house or at school. You can buy books and leave them with a friend. You can even create an altar at home if you're clever enough about disguising it as shelf decorations.

Nonetheless, please do your best to minimize the deception you practice, as your parents might associate Wicca with lying if they catch you enough times. If your parents ask you about your religion, be honest, and do everything you can to keep a cool head. If you can state your case clearly, without getting angry, your parents are much more likely to listen to you and take you and your points seriously.

Above all, though, the important thing is to stay safe and try your best to keep the home environment harmonious, which is good for your parents but also for you. Deep down, we all wish we could share everything with our parents, but when that's not possible we can still follow our hearts, and do so safely.

Mastering The Magick Of Witchcraft
<http://www.masteringmagickwitchcraft.com>

Rose Ariadne Blog
<http://www.rose-ariadne.com>

Ask Rose Ariadne
<http://www.askroseariadne.com>

